Program Overview

The Master of Business Law (MBL) is a 36 credit-hour program curriculum is designed to prepare students to identify and address legal and ethical issues in the business environment. Students in the MBL program will develop skills in analytical reasoning and substantive legal knowledge typically available only to students who undertake a three-year juris doctor program. The program also develops skills in decision making, dispute resolution and ethics. MBL students closely examine the legal and ethical risks inherent in a business environment and a significant federal regulatory scheme through their final research project.

IMPORTANT NOTE: The MBL program provides students an exceptional opportunity to acquire valuable knowledge and skills for application in business settings. However, the MBL program does not provide students or graduates with any of the credentials required to take a bar examination or practice law.

Admissions Requirements

In addition to the requirements stated under the Graduate Admissions Policy of the University Catalog, the requirements for admission to the Master of Business Law are as follows:

- A signed, completed application and a $45 application fee ($65 international fee).
